Perhaps, even more unfortunate is that fact that all of these poorest countries are in Sub-Saharan Africa. These countries' misfortune is exacerbated by factors such as economic insecurity, political instability, civil wars, terrorist activities, corruption and of course natural disasters. Among this country includes: Burundi, Somalia, Central African Republic, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Niger, Mozambique, Liberia, Malawi, Madagascar. There is a similar trend common to all these countries – years of conflicts, political instability, corruption and mismanagement of natural resources. These are man-made problem that could be solved. So, let's solve them in order to give people in these countries a chance at better living. With regards to the other problem of natural disasters, solving the first set of problems would make it a lot easier to handle drought. After all, countries like Saudi Arabia and the UAE have successfully transformed deserts into ever-green farmlands. They could only do that because they have working systems.
